the Employees total Early Vesterday. The run on the savings' department of the Mechanics Trust Company of West Eighth street, Beachine, betasti out yesterday after about 5,5300,000 of deposits had been withdrawn. This was only a fifth part of the company's deposits of that kind, so that after all there was little real excitement on the part of the directors. After the all day and all night run on Friday it was figured out that the penic had pretty well exhausted itself. Indeed, late Friday, when many persons still were trying to get their money out, others who had been among the first to grab their deposits were coming back with them Money from the Hanover National Bank in New York kept coming along in instalments until the company; finally had almost $1,000,000 with which to head off the rush. The fact that those who were after money were getting theirs without any lifficulty calmed down the depositors, o that when business began yesterday norning at 8:30 o'clock, a half hour earlier than usual, there was only a handful of persons about the doors. They were taken care of quickly, and at about 11 o'clock the waiting crowd had dwindled down to one or two.

Ordinarily the doors of the trust company close at 12 o'clock on Saturdays, but n order to restore public confidence they were kept wide open until 30'clock, and after that a policeman was stationed in front of the doors. He had orders to admit any one who wanted to get in, but there was almost nothing except in the way of merchants making deposits in the commercial department going on after noon.

The company is preparing a statement of the financial condition of the institution. It will be published on Tuesday.

The way that the report of the insolvency of the institution started is something that the bank people would like to know. -While somem believe that it was begun without intention by the ill advised remark of some person being distorted into another meaning. there are others who are said to think that it was the work of malice. It was suggested by one person that perhaps real estate speculators who found that the company would not loan them money were responsible would not loan them money were responsible for the report.

President DeWitt Van Buskirk said yesterday that he did not believe that that was the true case. He explained that not long ago it had been decided not to tie up the bank's money in real estate, especially as speculation had begun to grow a little wild. It was believed that there were other and better uses for the bank's money. On that account some of the speculators might have been disgruntled, but he did not believe that they could have been responsible for the report.

President Van Buskirk said that the most plausible theory was this: One man a few plausible theory was this: One man a few days ago had entered the bank with a fair sized check. The maker of the check did not have money enough on deposit to cover the face of it, so the bank clerk made the usual remark about no funds. From that it is supposed that the man went away with the idea that the bank was out of funds. At any event, it was not long after that the foreigners, who do most of the depositng in the savings department—they are mostly Poles and Huns from the Constable look district—began to flock in and look while the run was going on. On Friday, after being in the place up to 11 o'clock paying out money, they had to stay until 2 o clock in the morning getting the finances traightened out. Then they had to go to work early yesterday morning and stay, on until the late afternoon. Presi-tion Carrigan of the First National is a director of the Mechanics' Trust. That is all the connection between the three. Only the Mechanics Trust Company had a run.

Charles S. Noe, chairman of the board of directors, said: "We had a similar run in 1803 and paid out $250,000 that panic year before it stopped: These people will lose in months interest on their savings."

On an average other roads have in their possession 10,000 more of our cars than we have of foreign cars.

This is largely due to the fact that we originate more freight than other roads give to us, and in order to protect the industries along our lines we must let our

'Carmen' Given for the First Time Thi

"Carmen" was sung at the Metropolitan Opera House yesterday afternoon. Bizet's delightful opera had not been given pre usly by Mr. Conried's company, and a large audience was present. The presentation of the opera as a whole was characterized by much earnestness of intention and occasional arrivals at the desired level of dramatic intensity. It seemed as if some intangible reason the movement of the performance came to a stop every once in a while. Then it required much effort to set it going again. Not a little of the dulness of the afternoon was due to the unaccountable vocal caprices of some of the singers. Mme. Fremstad was the Carmen, and despite some splendid moments har impersonation was not what she originally gave this public. Her delivery of the music yesterday had a rudeness of style and a heaviness of tone which robbed it of subtlety of feeling and dramatic illusion. Doubtless it was owing to the weighty mood in which she felt the music that she made her histrionic presentation of the rôle heavy also. Her best art was disclosed in the card scene and in the struggle against fate in the last

Mme. Rappold sang and acted Micaela in a cold and meaningless style. The beauty of her final phrase in the solo of the third act aroused the audience, but for her own good she ought to have heard her own tremolo on all low tones. Mr. Rousseliere as Don José was lamentably deficient in quality of tone, correctness of intonation, and general excellence of style. Mr. Journet made a gallant battle with the music of Escamillo, but it is too high for him.

The minor parts were without exception badly done, and the comedy of the second act was thoroughly saddening. The chorus sang with a thin and tired tone and the orchestra played only tolerably. This catalogue of shortcomings ought to be sufficient to sum up a weak performance.

Mme. Sembrich was announced to sing Violetta in "La Traviata" last night, but she was suffering from a cold and again Bessie Abott had to substitute for her. Miss Abott appeared to be more at home in the rôle than in others in which she has appeared this season, and her acting showed more ease. She sang the music very creditably. Her chief associates were Mr. Dippel as Alfredo and Mr. Scotti as Giorgio.

At the Manhattan Opera House last night a Mme. Zepilli was heard for the first time as the Queen in "Les Huguenots." She did not establish a claim to extended glorification. The other members of the cast were the same as heretofore. In the afternoon "Il Barbiere di Siviglia" was sung by the same persons as before, except that Mr. Arimondi replaced Mr. Mugnoz as Don Basilio and gave a good impersonation of the oily priest. Mme. Rappold sang and acted Micaela silio and gave a good impersonation of the

THE SYMPHONY CONCERT. Converse's "Festival of Pan" Proves to Be an Interesting Novelty. The seventh subscription concert of the New York Symphony Orchestra took place last night at Carnegie Hall. The programme consisted of Schumann's E flat symphony, an arrangement by Mr. Damrosch of the love duet from the second act of "Tristan und Isolde"; F. S. Converse's "Festival of Pan," and Elgar's "Variations on an Original Theme." There was no soloist, all these numbers being for or-

Mr. Converse's composition, which he calls a romance, was heard for the first time here. It had no programme note to explain it, and it really did not seem to need any. The title was sufficient, and therein lies subject matter for more extended comment than may be made at this time. Mr. Converse is at any rate content to remain within the limits formerly set for musical expression and has not crossed into that debatable land wherein text clamors for the exercise of its office.

"The Festival of Pan" begins and ends with a slow movement, which apparently depicts the forest. In the middle is a brilliant, melodious and admirably scored allegro which paints the festival. much is clear to any one. Mr. Converse has a programme, not too elaborate, but it was not in evidence last night, and the fact that the composition without it propounded no insoluble problems was to the credit of the composer, who has a good orchestral technic and a grip on form.

Mr. Damrosch conducted the composition with sympathy and had plainly given it proper rehearsal. The orchestra played tion with sympachy and had plainly given it proper rehearsal. The orchestra played the music sxellently, and indeed was good throughout the concert. Schumann's delightful old Rhenish symphony went very well indeed. Mr. Damrosch has always conceived both the first and the last moveconceived both the first and the last move-ments at a pace somewhat slower than some other conductors take them, but there is much to be said in favor of his idea. The conductor's arrangement of "Tristan und Isolde" music gave David Mannes, the solo violinist, and Leo Schulz, the first 'cellist, opportunities to soar into the regions of pure melody. Altogether it was a con-cert of good music, well played, and an audience of fairly large size seemed to enjoy it.

STATE FARMERS ORGANIZING.

To Form State, District and Local Union Similar to Labor Unions.

UTICE, Feb. 2.-Plans for the organiza tion of the farmers of New York State on lines similar to the labor unions, with local, district and State headquarters, have been perfected by the Central New York Farmers' Club and the task of organizing the agriculturists will be undertaken forth-The combination will be known as "The Milk and Farm Producers' Association." The State will be divided into thirteen districts, each with its own union, each locality to have a union incorporated under the laws of the State and to be capitalized secording to its needs.

The object of the association will be "to The object of the association will be "to establish fair prices for all milk and farm products as between producer and consumer; to regulate the supply so as to adapt it to the demand and to mitigate the evils arising from a surplus; to insure justice to producers as to weights, &c.; to promote whatever changes or reforms are necessary to insure justice to producer and consumer alike; to handle milk, cheese, butter, eggs and all farm products, and to deal more direct with the consumer."

and all farm products, and to deal more direct with the consumer."

All producers of agricultural products will be eligible to membership, and such other persons as might be approved by the local unions. All cheese and butter factories, milk shipping stations, cold storage plants and necessary storehouses for farm products will be owned and controlled by the local unions in the different district unions.

WANTS A PRETTY YANKEE WIFE.

Young Man Writes From Manila to

Most Beautiful Girl in Middleboro." MIDDLEBORO, Mass., Feb. 2.-The pretty girls of this town are evidently famed even to the furthermost lands over which Uncle Sam's flag floats.

To-day a letter was received by Postmaster Bearse from Manila. Inside of it he found another addressed to "The most beautiful young lady in Middleboro."

Mr. Bearse asked one of the clerks to decide who should have the letter. A wait of a few minutes elapsed and the one whom the clerk thought was the "most beautiful" came along and the letter was passed out to her. She opened it and found the following:

lowing:

A young man, aged 26 years, of good standing and character, sober and industrious, holding a good Government position here, with a salary capable of supporting two, would like to correspond with a young lady from 18 years to 21 years old, who is good looking and who would make an ideal housewife, with the intention of marriage.

"Write at once, stating age, description and terms.

VASSAR IS GETTING TOO BIG.

PRESIDENT TAYLOR WARNS THE ALUMNE OF THE DANGER.

Limit of Students Has Been Fixed at 1.000 and Can't Be Changed Until Some Solution of the Problem is Offered

The pressing danger of overcrowding in the larger women's colleges and the needs of Vassar in particular on this point were presented to the alumnæ of Vausar College yesterday afternoon by President Taylor of the college at the annual luncheon of the alumnæ association at Delmonico's. President Taylor declared that the danger lay along two lines, the crowding of student and the crowding of studies. He suggested that perhaps the adoption of the Oxford plan of allied but separate colleges might be the solution.

President Taylor was presented to the alumnæ by their president, Miss Elizabeth Cutting, who remarked that a Vassar girl had once been overheard to say that she feared that if she remained at Vassar long enough President Taylor would be her ideal man. The Vassar girl's fears have been realized by the alumnæ, if one may judge by the warmth of the recep-tion which President Taylor received. He looked pleased, but plunged at once into serious talk.

President Taylor declared that while the standard of Vassar was equal to that of any nstitution of its kind in the world, whether for men or women, yet the number of stu-dents, closely approaching the thousand mark, made the problem of individual attention a difficult one. He said that recently the trustees had fixed the limit of the number of students at 1,000, and he believed that it was a good idea to hold to that limit, at least until some solution of the problem was found. He declared that the large universities were facing the same problem and that it was the least easy of solution and the one that needed most attention of any now before the educational tention of any now before the educational world.

In closing President Taylor told of the improvements at Vassar. He said that more and more attention was to be paid to the sethetic side of life at Vassar, and that when the plans now under discussion are carried out Vassar's campus and surroundings would be the most beautiful in the world. All that was needed, he said, was for some man with $500,000 to come along and say, "Begin."

Dr. A. H. Strong, president of the Rochester Theological School and also president of the Vassar board of trustees, told of the early struggles of that body, but declared that, thanks to the influence of the alumnae, the board was at present as well behaved and good looking a body as might be found. He told of the growing numbers at Vassar, but seemed to think that numbers were rather to be desired.

"If the demand of women for higher education continues to grow," said he, "we will soon have a government of women, by women and for women." He predicted that within ten years the world would see institutions of learning for women alone with an attendance of over 2,000 students. He insisted that it was the duty of the college to meet the growing demand.

John G. Milburn told the alumnae how the problem of social student life was solved at Oxford. He oraised highly the outdoor life meet the growing demand.

John G. Milburn told the alumnæ how the problem of social student life was solved at Oxford. He praised highly the outdoor life and 5 o'clock tea, but said that after all he did didn't know that he would advise any of his audience to send their boys there rather than to an American university.

St. Clair McKelway told how sorry he was that Vassar had closed her doors to him as a student and what good times he had had within those doors as a visitor. He pleased his audience for many minutes by skilful conversational gymnastics, and after it was all over remarked that he had come to talk of the relation of the college to the Board of Regents. According to Mr. McKelway those relations were most pleasant.

At the close of the speeches Miss Cutting announced the officers of the Vassar Alumnæ Association for the current year. They are: President, Miss Louise Holmquist of the class of '00; treasurer, Miss Beatrice V. Abbott, '99, a daughter of the Rev. Lyman Abbott. Mrs. J. H. McIntosh of the class of '80 and Miss Julia Searing of the class of '06 were elected directors of the association.
